

Inside Story

17 February 2011

HEALTH | The Gillard program: reform without change?

Markets and demand are transforming the health system but the policy debate isn't catching up, writes James Gillespie

PROFILE | The man who would be premier

Barry O'Farrell reached the NSW Liberal leadership by an unconventional route, writes Brett Evans

LETTER FROM LONDON | Life in the UK: the exam

In London, Ian Henderson finds that Britain's migration test reveals more about its authors than they would ever have anticipated

BOOKS | Lucking into the zeitgeist

Iain Topliss reviews the memoir of Jules Feiffer, the cartoonist who made anxiety funny

FROM THE ARCHIVE | "It's much more fun in general practice. I can play in any field; I don't regret it one bit."

Talk about health policy reform often loses sight of the people in the system and their stories. Melissa Sweet watches two GPs in action in the south-west Sydney suburb of Condell Park

Other recent articles in Inside Story

CLIMATE | A new momentum

The findings of the Garnaut update increase the pressure for Australia to adopt a carbon price, writes Frank Jotzo

LETTER FROM CAIRO | Egypt's next phase: a competition for influence and support

The "eternal brown land" is preparing for a further deluge of political energy in response to decades of growing pressure, writes Tarek Osman in Cairo

LETTER FROM ACCRA | As Côte d'Ivoire burns, Ghana dances

Ghana has its fair share of developmental headaches, but a heavy handed government isn't one of them, writes Aleks Vickovich in Accra

FROM THE ARCHIVE | India's toughest contest

Hope and perseverance drive the enormous number of young Indians with ambitions to work in government, reports Kate Sullivan

Inside Story
Swinburne Institute for Social Research
PO Box 218
Hawthorn 3122
Australia