

Inside Story

3 December 2010

BOOKS | Doing the right thing

Brett Evans reviews a surprising account of Guantanamo Bay's first 100 days

FOREIGN AFFAIRS | All or nothing?

The Wikileaks disclosures show the need to refine the balance between private and public diplomacy, writes Geoffrey Barker

ANALYSIS | Australia's tenacious pay gap

Forty-one years after the declaration of the principle of equal pay, we're still not there, writes Norman Abjorensen

MALAYSIA | Global Gaza, Global Ummah

Malaysia's Free Gaza campaign is pitched at both international and domestic audiences, writes Amrita Malhi

Other recent articles in Inside Story

POLICY | Paying for Australia's infrastructure deficit

Public-private partnerships have turned out to be an expensive way of plugging infrastructure gaps, writes Nicholas Gruen. The evidence shows that governments need to get back into the investment business

TRADE | Lessons from the Australia-US Free Trade Agreement

The agreement delivered few, if any, of the benefits promised by its advocates, writes John Quiggin, but its adverse consequences have also been more limited than many critics predicted

DESIGN | Fonts we can believe in

Great typefaces combine the banal and the beautiful, according to one designer. Richard Johnstone reviews an engrossing account of their vast and ever-increasing variety and uses

ESSAY | Murat and Nevin and the divided past

How do young Germans from migrant backgrounds view the injustices of the past? Josefine Raasch talks to two sixteen-year-olds in Berlin

CINEMA | Breaking the stereotypes

Sylvia Lawson reports from the third Palestinian Film Festival

BOOKS | Utopians

Grant Evans reviews an account of the Great Famine, another major blow to the Mao myth